

Oliver and Friends

Amazing things can happen when you're
Living the Beach Life

By Heidi Fagerberg
Edited by Carol Mitchell

About the author: Heidi holds degrees in Early Childhood Development, Education, and Human Services. She was born and raised in Irvington, New York. She has since lived in Delaware, Costa Rica and now has her home on St Kitts, a small island in the Caribbean. Currently she is working on additional books and developing project-based curriculum for the Living the Beach Life series. Throughout her life Heidi has been dedicated to caring for and educating the young and old alike. In 2008, she founded the St. Kitts Sailing School and during the time that the school was in operation she interacted with and cared for the characters in her books. She has taken a keen interest in orphaned animals and has adopted some of her own. Her love of photography and writing was rekindled by the beautiful island on which she lives and the animals that she loves. This has led her to create the series - Living the Beach Life.

About the Editor: Carol Mitchell is a professional editor, the founder of CaribbeanReads Publishing and the author of the Caribbean Adventure Series.

Photographs by Heidi Fagerberg
Also including photos by Jason Pereira and Lindsay Brockman.
Photo of glasses on page 26 by Belinda Pretorius/Shutterstock.com

CaribbeanReads Publishing, Washington DC, 20006

First Edition

© 2014 by CaribbeanReads Publishing

All rights reserved.

ISBN: 9780989930550

Remember me?

My name is Oliver and I grew up on the island of St. Kitts.

Two months old

One year old

Three years old

You may have read stories that Lion Paw and Wilbur shared. Now it's my turn to tell a story.

It's about a time when we were all together, living the beach life.

First there was Wilbur,

then there was Lion Paw,

and then there was me.

That made three.

And then there were four. Can you guess what animal came to live with us next?

It did not moo,

and it did not hop.

